After Jack's girlfriend breaks up with him, he sets off on a road trip across the United States with his older brother, Neal. With no destination and little idea what they are searching for, the brothers travel from place to place, meeting all kinds of people and getting caught up in strange, funny, dangerous, and sometimes heartbreaking adventures. Through the lives of the strangers they meet—and their changing relationship with each other—Jack and Neal begin searching for an answer to one deceptively simple question: What makes life worth living?
